

Editor's Note

This is the volume 28 No.2 of BSJ that be publishes online for the period of May to August, 2023. There are 40 articles be published which most of them (80%) be submitted from the external source. The majority of the articles are still in marine science and foods science. Surprisingly papers in GIS is running to the top 3 while other disciplines take a little part in this issue. Any how BSJ would like to encourage all authors from every discipline in sciences to submitted yours article to be published.

The BSJ has a target to improve the quality of the journals to be considered and be in the international data base. There are a lot of issues those BSJ need to be achieve which, of course, need support from many stakeholders especially the editorial board which work with patient and love for a long time. I am very appreciating for their contribution until know.
